Mr. and Mrs. McKinley received in the bow window of the drawing room. They were assisted by Col. and Mrs. Osborne, of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Myron T. Herrick and Messrs. M. A. Hanna, of Cleveland, A. C. Tonner and George B. Frease and Charles R. Miller, of Canton. Mrs. McKinley sat during the evening, and was a charming hostess. Mr. McKinley seemed un-moved by the fatigue of standing, and was like himself, always the most distinguished member of the party, with a hospitable greeting and pleasant word for every body. The hours of the reception were from 2 to 4 in the afternoon and from 7 to 11 in the evening A buffet luncheon was served, the guests standing and the table being handsomely decorated with flowers, and lighted by candelabra. The constantly moving company completely filled the drawing room and sitting room, hall, stairway and library, and was dense during the entire evening. George D. Saxton Makes Answer-Larry Steele in Trouble. CANTON, Feb. 6.—George D. Saxton, by his attorneys, Wm. R. Day and J J Grant, today filed an answer to the petition wherein he is named as defendant, recently filed by Annie E. George. The defendant denies that he holds any personal property of any kind what oever which now or at any time belonged to Annie George. Mr. Saxton further answers by stating that in 1891 Annie George borrowed money from him, and later, in the early part of 1892, desired him to lead her more. This money was given in exchange for Annie George's note for $300 This note is now due and is anpaid. It was agreed between the plaintiff and himself, Mr. Saxton claims, that he should hold all the former's property until said note had been redeemed. He explains that at all times he has been willing to surrender to the plaintiff all the personal property of hers in his possession, providing the note was paid. He adds that the plaintiff has claimed many things not belonging to her. The action of the plaintiff was that of replevin and Mr. Saxton petitions the court for the same relief concerning the same property.

MORE BRIDGES FOR CANTON.

The following bids for the erection of bridges have been received by the county commissioners for two Canton bridges: Massillon Bridge company, Ninth street, $15.650; Laiblin road, $7, Wrought Iron Bridge company, plan BB $8,370; Laiblin road, $6,362. Pennsylvania Bridge company, Ninth street, $16,000; Laiblin road, $7,600. On comparison it was found that the bids of the Wrought Iron Bridge company was the lowest for Ninth street, $8.370, and the contract was awarded to that company. The Canton Bridge campany received the contract for the Laiblin road bridge at $6,862.

A New Move in the George Koons Case.

VERDICT AGAINST THE EVIDENCE

Defendant's Attorneys Quote the Lan guage of the State's Counsel in Urging Conviction as a Means of Preventing the Increase of Crime.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., Feb. 6.-The following motion was filed Wednesday afternoon in the court of over and terminer of Blair county, and is the first step taken since the conviction of George Koons (Frank Wilson) since last Friday at midnight:

The defendant's counsel in the above case respectfully move for arrest of judgment and for a new trial for the following reasons:

1st. Because the verdict is against the 2d. Because the verdict is against the evidence. 3d. Because the verdict is not sustained by the weight of all the evidence in the case, and is not warranted by the law and the testimony in the case.

4th. Because the learned district attorney told the jury in his closing address, that the people "have been alarmed and horrified by the commission of the most diabolical crime ever committed in any community. The judignation of the people is aroused. Crime is becoming too prevalent in this county. Murder is becoming too frequent and escapes from punishment are becoming too numerons. Read the records of the commonwealth for the last year and you will find that no less than 8,000 murders have been committed in this state alone. He stands here today one of the most despised criminals it is possible to conceive a demon of the blackest dye. He has been abandoned by all his friends. He has no one to sit here, and interest himself in his trial he has not one scintilla of evidence to recommend him as a man.

5th. Because the learned private counsel for the prosecution told the jury in his closing address that the people of the county, some 70,000 were waiting to see if the spiritof homicidal violence was to be checked or continued that the homes or the juors themselves might be imperiled that the spirit of this old man, Heary Bonnecka, is here today asking for vengeance. It would be an injustice and an outrage to turn him loose to prey upon the community.

6th. It is clear that the jury in the case failed to give to the defendant the benefit of the doubt to which he was entitled. That they had a doubt, was conclusively shown by the request that they made to the court for instructions and by the paper which they returned with their verdict containing their written request to the board of pardons to commute the offense from murder in the first degree to murder in the second degree. The verdict was not the result of twelve consenting minds. 7th. The court is respectfully requested to order that the foregoing reasons be filed and that the defendant's counsel be allowed an opportunity to file other and supplemental reasons within such reasonable time as to right and justice shall appertain.

G. H. SPANG, R. H. HENDERSON,

Attorneys for defendant. To which the court made the following endorsement: By the court, Feb 5th. 1896, it is ordered that this paper be filed and counsel for defendant are allowed ten days from this date within which to file additional reasons.

WEST BROOKFIELD

WEST BROOKFIELD, Feb. 7 .- Our people were very much surprised Thursday afternoon to hear of the death of Peter Paul, whose death occurred very unexpectly. Mr. Paul was a native of Germany, he came to this country when a young man, and located in this village nearly 50 years ago. He was well known in Massillon as well as here, having worked many years in Russell & Co.'s works. He leaves two daughters, Jirs. John Brand, of this place, with whom he made his home, and Mrs. Lutz, of Toledo. The funeral services will be held in St. Barbara's church, Saturday, at 9:30 a.m. The deceased was about 76 years of age.

The county primary election must be held several months earlier than usual, this year, because of the necessity of nominating delegates to the national Republican convention. There will also be the usual local primary election, this spring, and unless the two elections are combined they will fall only a few weeks apart. Why not adopt the plan that is meeting with favor elsewhere, and settle all these questions at once? There is no important reason for engaging in two contests, when everything might be determined in one day and in just as satisfactory a manner. Then the summer would be freed from discussion of those minor local issues, and permit of full enjoyment of the greater contest. Over a month remains for the preliminary work. This will give candidates for county offices and for seats in the national convention ample time in which to make themselves known.

quite a pleasure to drop into the room of the house committee on foreign affairs and hear the scholarly view of Chairman R. R. Hitt, who grows more confident as the weeks go on that the nations have about learned that they cannot afford to fight. He thinks that the deterrents to war have increased with such rapidity in the last 20 years that a long war would ruin the richest nation, and that no man, however scientific, can foresee the result of a contest between different navies as at present constituted. "One great fact is," said he, "that all the romance that comes of personal prowess is completely eliminated, while the danger is eigenmously increased. BOND BUYING AND MAKING.

Work on the Government's New Issue.

A LARGE BONDHOLDER.

How the Securities Are Made and Handled.

William H. Vanderbilt as a Coupon Cutter-The Small Cost of Sending the New Issue Over the Country-The Risk of Loss Is Not Very Great-Still the Government Has Made an Enormous Amount In Lost Securities.

[Copyright, 1896.] Just as soon as the bids for the new bonds were opened at the treasury department in Washington Secretary Carlisle reviewed and accepted such as offered the government the greatest profit, or rather the least expense in the negotiation of the lean. The bidders were notified, and word was sent to the chief of the bureau of engraving and printing to get to work on the bonds. The plates were all ready for printing the different denominations. They have been ready for some time. It is easy enough to prepare plates for a bond issue. The designs already on hand are used, with such minor changes in dates as are made requisite by the terms of the new loan. The bond designs are stereot ped. They are made up in the bureau from the old stock "borders" and "vignetres," which fill a huge album in the office of the bureau chief. No attempt to make a distinctive bond design has ever been made. In fact, there was never a complete design for currency until the bureau accepted the work of Artists Shiriaw and Low recently,

The stereotyped bond designs are kept on cylinders of hardened steel. From one of these the d sign can be transferred to a soft stool plate in a transfer press by the process of rolling under heavy pressure. Then the figures, dates, etc., on the plate can be removed and new figures and dates put in their places. The plate is hardened then, and from it the altered form is transferred on the press to a cylinder of soft steel. This cylinder is lardened in the furnace, and with it many plates are made. There is a different plate, of course, for each denomination. The number of plates of each design made from the cylinders is regulated by the demand for those denominations. The smaller bonds are in the greatest demand, of course, and therefore the number of plates for the smaller denominations is greater.

A Matter of Record. The distinctive paper on which the bonds are printed has been seasoning in the vaults of the bureau for a long time. Before the work of printing is completed the chief will have a memorandum of the exact number wanted, and this number will be delivered to the treasury department, going over in the big inclosed wagon which carries all the government securities from the engraving bureau to the treasury department. The bonds are not made complete at the bureau. The final touch is added at the treasury department. when the government scal is printed on them. The signatures on bank notes or government currency are engraved at the bureau and printed when the notes are printed, but the signature of the register on the bonds is made at the treasury, not case; but, so far as possible, they must be by the register himself, but by one of the clerks, who also puts his distinctive mark on the bond when he makes a record of it. Every bond can be traced back through the official hands which touched it in the process of making and issuing it and the responsibility for any error placed where it belongs. This eaution is very necessary, since one little bond may represent $50,-000. Only one hand greater than this amount was ever issued by the government, and this hond now bangs on the wall of the office of the register of the treasury. It was for $15,500,000, the amount of the Geneva award paid by England in satisfaction of what were known as the "Alabama claims." This money was paid to Hamilton Fish as secretary of state, and as congress had made no provision for the disposal of it he invested it in government 5 per cents, and the secretary of the treasury, for convenionce, issued a single hond to him. The 💼 d was canceled when the court of Ala- : bama claims distributed its awards. Boside this big bond on the wall of the register's office hangs the oldest bond recorded in the treasury. It was issued Feb. 6, 1777, to John Bonfield. It was for $300, and it was to run for three years, with interest at 4 per cent. An Individual Holding. Fish once held did not represent by 65 per Only 1 per cent of the registered bonds cent the amount of government bonds once held by an individual. William H. Vanderbilt once owned in registered bonds $45,000,000. The records of the treasury show this fact. The treasury department knows just where all of the registered bonds are held, with the exception of a few which are in the hands of people to whom they have not been transferred form. ally after purchase. The purchasers of registered bonds do not wait very long before notifying the secretary of the treasury and going through the formality of transfer, as the checks for interest for the bonds are sent to the persons whose names appear on the books of the treasury department. On the treasury books an account is opened with each person who becomes the owner of registered bonds. The books are closed one month before the time when interest is due.

After the books close no transfers are made until the interest checks have been mailed. These checks are mailed promptly on the day when the interest is due, and they are made payable to order. They can be exchanged for gold at any subtreasury I the payce is identified. These checks are sent out in the official envelopes of the treasury department, which require no postage stamps and which are forwarded by the postofice department to any change of address. In fact, the postoffice department makes every reasonable effort to trace the people to whom these interest cheeks are addressed, and it happens in but few cases that they are not found. In those few cases the checks are returned to the treasury, where they are held awaiting the claim of the owner of the bond. But the checks, which are delivered promptly in almost every case, are not sent in promptly for collection. People who own large quantities of government securities are methodical in their handling of treasury checks and deposit them for collection the day they are received. But people who have comparatively small sums invested in bonds, and who have no good investment in sight, frequently save the cheeks of the treasury as a safe form of deposit. They accumulate until the owner dies, in some cases, and then the executor of his estate sends them in in a lump. Sometimes they are destroyed, and then the government is ahead so much. Often bonds are destroyed, and their value is not claimed, and the government has been the gainer by the carelessness of bondnolders in an enormous amount.

Government Profit. It happens several times in each year that a bond of date preceding the civil war comes in for payment. In some cases the interest has censed for 50 years. At simple interest, along the holder would be entitled to four times the face of the bond, but the government recognizes no claim to interest on money leat to it anasked, and he receives only the face of the bond. The government bas made a profit of $1,250,-200 or more on bonds through the calture if owners to present them for redemption. and its profies on unpaid interest must amount to rearly as peuch. Yet every reasonable effort is made by the freasury to pay its loan debts. Provision is made for the issue of duplicates of both coupon and registered bonds when they have been destroyed, or of a registered bond when it has been lost by the owner. If the owner of a registered band comes to the treasury department and makes application for the issue of a duplicate, filing a pernetual bond in double the amount, with accrued interest, the government will issue a du-

Sometimes they are destroyed entirely, and on the presentation of satisfactory affidavits, whether the bond is compon or registered, the secretary of the treasury will issue a duplicate on the terms I laye named. In one case of record in the department a bond was duplicated on a plain showing that it had been destroyed, and later it turned up in the original. The owner had really believed it destroyed, but it had merely got into some waste, and it was found at the paper mill. In another case the treasury issued a duplicate of a bond which was found later in a bank vault and sent in for account of the owner by the man who found it. No "Popular" Loan. The number of coupon bonds in the present issue is larger than it will be a year hence, because as the securities acoumulate in the hands of investment purchasers the coupon bonds will be exchanged for the registered bonds. treasury to individuals or to the subtreasuries where they are to be delivered to the subscribers. A comparatively small amount will be taken from the treasury department by subscribers here, and some people will ship gold or gold certificates to the treasury from not far distant points and ask that the bonds be shipped to them direct. But most of the bids opened call for the delivery of the bonds at the subtreasuries in New York, Philadelphia and other large cities. The bonds are put up four gates of the capital constables are in heavy paper wrappers, sealed with the treasury seal and delivered to the agent of the United States Express company, who has an office in the treasury building. His company has the contract for carrying all the government's securities. The com- queues, in the rural districts the Kopany will make about $7,500 out of the issue. The average government express rate for bonds is 71/2 cents on each thousand dollars carried in the territory east of the Missouri river. The rate for the coupon bond is 10 cents and for the registered bond 5 cents. The risk in carrying registered bonds is very small-almost nothing, in fact-and the rate charged on them merely pays for the labor of handling and transporting. But if an express car should be robbed and $5,000,000 worth of registered bonds solen and destroyed, even a rich express company would feel a little bit embarrassed when called on to give a perpetual bond for $10,000,090 for the issue of duplicates. There is not much likelihood of any such happening, though. No bonds have been stolen within the experience of the company now having the contract.

A Gigantic Issue. The largest issue of bonds ever made by the government was in 1877, when $741,-000,000 worth were put out, but these bonds were not sold or subscribed like the present issue. They were used in funding a loan then due which the government was not prepared to pay in cash. The first big borrowing transaction of the government occurred in 1861, when congress, in view of the civil war, voted the secretary of the treasury authority to use the public credit more freely than it had been used before. The amount of money berrowed under this authority was $150,000,000, and the Joan was not even so "popular" as the one about to be made. There was no "gold syndicate" at that time, but the se retary of the treasury had to go to the bankers of New York, Philadelphia and other large cities and ask assistance. The government's credit was badly inepaired, and it was impossible to get runny abroad, but the banks agreed to take from the reasing department a first issue of $50,090,000 and then second and third issues of like amount and to put the benus out gradually among the people. This actionved the government's credit and no doubt saved the Union, for without the help of the banks the people would not have been persnaded to take the bonds and the money to carry on the war for the Umon would not have been obtainable, George Grantham Bain.

A BOOKLET WITH POETIC FEET THAT

The Humorist Gives an Object Lesson by Dropping Into Rhyme Himself, and Also Explains the Etiquette of Cards-Other Suggestions For the Society Novice.

[Copyright, 1896, by Edgar W. Nye.] A cheery little poem of 321 verses comes to this office recking with divine afflootus from the job office at Vevay, Ind. It is in the form of a booklet and looks some like Peter Henderson's Seed Catalogue For 1896.

The title to this work is "Recollegtions of School Days." The only good feature about the work is that it is not a plagiarism on James Whitcomb Riley. It is more like Owen Moredith, I think.

The poetic feet, however, are not mates. Every little while you find a much higher in the instep. It runs along something like "Lucile." No pun is intended here. Poetic feet and "Lucile" have no concealed humorous connection.

The author's rhyme is a little bit free also. This is a fair sample of the style: The schoolhouse was small, and the benches As also the desks where the big scholars were

Here are three of the first stanzas: A MILLER'S LOVE.

[By Bishop, the Bird Man.]

In a land far away, by the side of a stream, There stood an old mill, of which I off dream.

The old miller's daughter, a maiden named Clyde, Was my only love and inteneed bride.

So it would seem that Clyde was somewhat of a contertionist. We have always heard of the wonderful beauty of the Baltimore girls, but their agility has never before, I think, been suitably embalmed in song. It is not often that I drop into rhyme, but where I can thus express a great truth, and in that form, I may be pardoned perhaps for doing so. I do not idealize so much in my verse, but prefer rather to express with great force some I love nature, as all true poets must,

and would be glad to paint a rhythmic picture with the verbal coloring of a Byron, but that is not wherein my great session. Following is the programme: from himself he credited his own account with that much.

The verses given below resemble the style of Longfellow, and yet the great idea contained in them is my own. While there is a touch of sadness in the first three stanzas, the earnest truth is not, on the whole, sacrificed to sentiment or poetic construction:

FOOTSTEPS. Years ago the post told us we could Make our lives sublime, And, departing, leave behind us Footprints on the sands of time—

Footprints that perhaps another, Sailing o'er life's stormy main, Some forlorn and shipwreeked brother, Seeing, might take heart again.

Ah, the footsteps of my mother! How they shaped my early course! How they steered me and me brother With their strong yet gentle force!

Now my days are swiftly flering, But the memory naught can shake Of those footsteps on my being That her shipper used to make.

Again it becomes necessary to throw more light upon the ever attractive topic of card etiquette.

Girls are not allowed to have cards after their second season. Prior to that than 11 o'clock p. m. should put the time the fly leaf of a hymnbook will be found to do very well.

Where one is making formal calls on one's friends and where there are gentlemen in the house, one should leave one of one's own cards for each lady and one of one's husband's cards for each person in the house on whom one's husband would have called had he came, but if one's husband is absent in Dakota and liablo never to return one may use one's own discretion about leaving one's husband's cards.

You should not get your "at home" cards mixed up with the visiting cards. Visiting cards cannot be satisfactorily removated with benzine. A telephone number should never be put on a visiting card, nor should rates for board, in case one keeps summer boarders, be engraved on the card. It is in shocking taste and among the nobility is regarded with abhorrence.

After a tea one should call on the hostess at an early date, and one card should be left. Where cake was served with the tea, one should leave two cards.

Where friends call in a hired conveyance or by street car, the call may be returned by mailing the usual cards. In cases where callers occupy the time by reciting the bright sayings of their own children, instead of listening to my recital of what my children have said, I return their calls by messenger boy, "lect." Where one starts out to make a call in one's carriage and meets the people on whom one had started to call, an exchange of cards may be made from one carriage to the other, and the question of who should make the first subsequent call may be settled on the spot by a friendly game of "old sledge.

In calling upon the president of the United States one need not leave a card for each member of the cabinet.

It is in execrable taste to put a purple brownie stamp on your visiting cards, as it is also to ask your hostess to preserve and return any unsoiled cards of your own which she may have at the end of the season.

If a gentleman calls at your home at 2 o'clock in the morning in order to return your husband from the club, you need not return the call unless a friendly acquaintance should spring up at the time and one which it might be agreeahour of his departure on his card, so that at the end of the month his gas account may be arranged without haggling and acrimony.

Never offer to assist a middle aged man in putting on his overcoat. An old man needs assistance and a young man enjoys it very much under certain circumstances, but to a middle aged man it implies encroaching years and is therefore highly offensive. If you are a host and wish to be extremely hospitable, do not, after your guest has his overcoat fairly on, seek to pull down the tail of his undercoat by reaching up among his suspenders. Some men are quite sensitive and ticklish under such circumstances and resent too much hospitality.

In making a call, if you find that a large "social" is being held at the house, you may conceal yourself at the barn until the guests have gone away, and then you may emerge with some appropriate witticism.

Where a gentleman calls in his official character as sheriff of the county in which one lives, one cannot be too careful in returning the call as promptly as possible. A visiting card or P. P. C. card sent by mail is not sufficient.

In making a call at a strange house, if you have just lighted an expensive cigar, do not ask the footman to take charge of it while you are making your call. He might be tempted to smoke it all up. It is wrong to place temptation in the way of servants who may be in Rank Extortion.

An instance of the way in which the simplest problems in mathenatics sometimes present strange difficulties is told by an eyewitness of an amusing incident in a New England street car. An old A gentleman caller who remains later lady handed the conductor a 10 cent piece which was Canadian money. The conductor handed the old lady a 5 cent piece, not discovering at the moment the character of the coin he had received.

As soon as he saw his mistake, he turned back and said, "Lady, I am sorry, but we are not allowed to take Canadian money." And so saying he handed her the 10 cent piece.

"Are you sure that's my money?" asked the old lady sharply.

"Yes, ma'am, and I'm sorry I made the mistake," said the conductor. "Oh, I'm willing to take it back, if you're sure it's mine," returned his passenger obligingly, slipping the dime into her pocketbook. "And your fare, please, ma'am," said the conductor respectfully, after a pause. "What? Why, I don't see how you calculate that. It's real mixin to me," said the old lady, flushing, as she took the identical 5 cent piece which she had received as change and handed it to the conductor. "Well, but, ma'am, I haven't had your fare yet," said the conductor patiently.

Don't you see how it is?" "No, young man, I don't," said the old lady, looking severely at him, "but rather than have any talk about it, I'll give you another 5 cents." She counted out five pennies and poured them into his hand; then she replaced her pocketbook in her bag and sank back into her seat with very red cheeks.

"Do you see how he figgered it, child?" she said, turning helplessly to the young woman next to her a moment later. "I shouldn't want to bandy words with him, for arithmet never was my strong point, but seems to me it was real extertion. There was 20 cents I had to give him before he was anyway satisfied, but I suppose he knows how he tiggered it!"—Youth's Companion.

Scenes at Their Reception Wednesday Evening.

A VERY BRILLIANT GATHERING

Guests from Many Cities Accept the Invitation of Ex-Governor and Mrs. McKinley and Assist in Celebrating the 25th Auniversary of their Marriage.

Canton, Feb. 6.—Ex-Governor and pleted the trimmings, and she carried bride roses. The crush of guests exceeded anything in the society annals of Stark county. Two locomotive head-McKinley residence in North Market street, and a carpet was spread from the curb to the entrance. The house, as most people know, is directly opposite Mrs. Aultman's residence, and is the one in which the distinguished couple began housekeeping 25 years ago. Eleven hundred invitations were sent out, but many of them went to far distant friends who sent cards. It is quite safe to believe that very few residents failed to be present, or regretted afterward that they had accepted the opportunity of mingling in so brilliant a throng.

Mr. and Mrs. McKinley received in the bow window of the drawing room. They were assisted by Col. and Mrs. Osborne, of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Myron T. Herrick and Messrs. M. A. Hanna, of Cleveland, A. C. Tonner and George B. Frease and Charles R. Miller, of Canton. Mrs. McKinley sat during the evening, and was a charming hostess. Mr. McKinley seemed unmoved by the fatigue of standing, and was like himself, always the most distinguished member of the party, with a hospitable greeting and pleasant word for every body. The hours of the reception were from 2 to 4 in the afternoon and from 7 to 11 in the evening.

A buffet luncheon was served, the guests standing and the table being handsomely decorated with flowers, and lighted by candelabra. The constantly moving company completely filled the drawing room and sitting room, hall, stairway and library, and was dense during the entire evening. There was great variety in the gowns worn, dark and light being about evenly divided. Many of the ladies were bonnets, but strict evening dress seemed to predomi-

Mr. Everhard says that they will save at least five dollars a day from now on, as they can burn chesp soft coal. The boilers are being fired at present with Massillon nut, but the fuel recommended is nut and slack combined, the mixture costing perhaps a dollar a ton.

The same consumer is now successfully in use at the Warthorst & Co. brick works and at the Sippo mills. Without drawings, the details of its construction could not be made known. Roughly speaking, the ordinary fire box is enlarged, and divided into two compartments, lengthwise. Each compartment is fired separately. > COURT HOUSE AND CANTON. George D. Saxton Makes Answer-Larry Steele in Trouble.

CANTON, Feb. 6.—George D. Saxton, by his attorneys, Wm. R. Day and J. J. Grant, today filed an answer to the petition wherein he is named as defendant, recently filed by Annie E. George. The defendant denies that he holds any personal property of any kind what oever which now or at any time belonged to Annie George. Mr. Saxton further answers by stating that in 1891 Annie George borrowed money from him, and later, in the early part of 1892, desired him to lead her more. This money was given in exchange for Annie George's note for $300 This note is now due and is unpaid. It was agreed between the plaintiff and himself, Mr. Saxton claims, that he should hold all the former's property until said note had been redeemed. He explains that at all times he has been willing to surrender to the plaintiff all the personal property of bers in his possession, providing the note was paid. He adds that the plaintiff has claimed many things not belonging to her. The action of the plaintiff was that of replevin and Mr. Saxton petitions the court for the same relief concerning the same property.

Thomas Mellon and Larry Steele, of Massillon, are under arrest here for brutally beating and kicking Julius Clerc, at "Paddy" Gallegher's saloon on Tuesday night. Clere is in the Aultman hospital and his condition is serious. The man was nearly kicked to death and suffers terribly. His head and face are o'clock on the special train. PURCHASE OF FINE HORSES.

John H. Fishel, of Minerva, has purchased of Charles C. Cook, two of Can ton's best horses, the price paid being $2,500. The horses are Black Ceeil, a 3 year old mare with a record of 2:181. and Minting, a bay stallion aged 4 years whose record is 2:2414. These horses will be wintered in Massillon. Cecil is a coming racer. Last year he was entered in six races finishing first in four and second in two. Minting also has a flattering record, and a splendid future is predicted for him.

MORE BRIDGES FOR CANTON.

The following bids for the erection of bridges have been received by the couny commissioners for two Canton bridges: Massillon Bridge company, Ninth street, $15,650; Laiblin road, $7, 575. Wrought Iron Bridge company, plan BB $8,370; Laiblin road, $6,362 Pennsylvania Bridge company, Ninth street, $16,000; Laiblin road, $7,600. On comparison it was found that the bids of the Wrought Iron Bridge company was the lowest for Ninth street, $8 370, and the contract was awarded to that company. The Canton Bridge campany re ceived the contract for the Laiblin road bridge at $6,362.

A New Move in the George Koons Case.

VERDICT AGAINST THE EVIDENCE

Defendant's Attorney, Quote the Language of the State's Counsel in Urging Conviction as a Means of Preventing the Increase of Crime,

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., Feb. 6.-The following motion was filed Wednesday afternoon in the court of over and terminer of Blair county, and is the first step taken since the conviction of George Koons (Frank Wilson) since last Friday at midnight:

The defendant's counsel in the above case respectfully move for arrest of judgment and for a new trial for the following reasons:

1st. Because the verdict is against the 2d. Because the verdict is against the

evidence. 3d. Because the verdict is not sustained by the weight of all the evidence in the case, and is not warranted by the law and the testimony in the case. 4th. Because the learned district attorney told the jury in his closing address, that the people "have been alarmed and horrified by the commission of the most diabolical crime ever committed in any community. The indignation of the people is aroused. Crime is becoming too prevalent in this county. Murder is becoming too frequent and escapes from punishment are becoming too numerous. Read the records of the commonwealth for the last year and you will find that no less than 8,000 murders have been committed in this state alone. He stands here today one of the most despised criminals it is possible to conceive a demon of the blackest dye. He has been abandoned by all his friends. He has no one to sit here, and interest himself in his trial he has not one scintilla of evidence to recommend him as a man. 5th. Because the learned private counsel for the prosecution told the jury in his closing address that the people of the county, some 70,000 were waiting to see if the spiritof homicidal violence was to be checked or continued that the homes of the juors themselves might be imperiled, that the sprit of this old man, Henry Bonnecka, is here today asking for vengeauce. It would be an injustice and an outrage to turn him loose to prey upon Frank, went back to Canton on Tuesthe community.

6th. It is clear that the jury in the case failed to give to the defendant the benefit of the doubt to which he was entitled. That they had a doubt, was conclusively shown by the request that they made to the court for instructions and by the paper which they returned with their verdict containing their written request to the board of pardons to com mute the offense from murder in the first degree to murder in the second degree. The verdict was not the resulof twelve consenting minds

7th. The court is respectfully request ed to order that the foregoing reasons be filed and that the defendant's counsel be allowed an opportunity to file other and supplemental reasons within such reasonable time as to right and justice shall appertain.

G. H. SPANG, R. H. HENDERSON,

Attorneys for defendant To which the court made the following endorsement: By the court, Feb 5th, 1896, it is ordered that this paper be filed and counsel for defendant are allowed ten days from this date within which to file additional reasons.

WEST BROOKFIELD

WEST BROOKFIELD, Feb. 7 .- Oar peo ple were very much surprised Thursday afternoon to hear of the death of Peter Paul, whose death occurred very unexpectly. Mr. Paul was a native of Germany, he came to this country when a young man, and located in this village nearly 50 years ago. He was well known in Massillon as well as here, having worked many years in Russell & Co.'s works. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. John Brand, of this place, with whom he made his home, and Mrs. Lutz, of Toledo. The funeral services will be held in St. Barbara's church, Saturday, at 9:30 a.m. The deceased was about 76 years of age.

The entertainment given in the Lutheran church, Wednesday evening, by Prof. F. S. Fox, of Pittsburg, was highly appreciated by those who heard him. The condition of the roads caused the audience to be small. We hope to have Mr. Fox with us again, when the weather is more favorable.

THE COMMITTEE'S ACTION.

Mr. DeArmit's Conclusions Pronounced Wrong-He is Invited to Attend the Meeting of the Joint Committee and Make Good His Assertions.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 7.—The joint committee of five operators and five miners met at the rooms of the Railroad Operators' Association Thursday to consider the objections raised by the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal Company to paying the district price, by claiming that "true uniformity" does not exist in the district. The meeting decided to invite President W. P. De Armit, of the company, to make another investigation of the conditions of affairs at each mine.

In order that nothing shall stand in the way and to prevent Mr. De Armit form getting out through a loophole, the committee decided to make the mvestigation in any manner that De Armit will designate. One of his objections was that his company was not represented on the committee that made the former investigation. In the next examination he will be allowed all the representation he wants, and, in fact, will begiven every opportunity to learn the truth. Before the committe bagan business it was decided to invite Mr. De Armit to attend the meeting, but it was found he was out of the city. "Pending the report of such committee we ask that the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal Company pay its employes the district price, and that all other operators continue doing the same, all of which is respectfully submitted with the hope that by the settlement of this dispute there may be avoided the suffering that would otherwise have to be endured in the several states affect-

Impassable, however, as some of our thoroughfares now seem to be, Mr. William Brown savs that if he and his brave companions of 1863 had had such roads to travel in the spring of that year they would have indeed considered themselves very fortunate.

"We were traveling in the vicinity of Vicksburg," said Mr. Brown, "some of us struggling through mud waist deep. It had been raining continuously for several days and the roads running through the dense forests resembled long, narrow bogs. At one place our heaviest cannon became fast in the mud. Mr. J. Park Alexander, fof Akron, thinks there is no need for worry about the passage of the Akron lake-grabbing bill. In his opinion it is proposterous on the face of it, and only introduced to satisfy somebody's desire for self-glorifica-

The supreme court has finally rendered ciation has worked so hard to win.

The county primary election must be held several months earlier than usual, this year, because of the necessity of nominating delegates to the national Republican convention. There will also be the usual local primary election, this spring, and unless the two elections are combined they will fall only a few weeks apart. Why not adopt the plan that is meeting with favor elsewhere, and settle all these questions at once? There is no important reason for engaging in two contests, when everything might be determined in one day and in just as satisfactory a manner. Then the summer would be freed from discussion of those minor local issues, and permit of full enjoyment of the greater contest. Over a month remains for the preliminary work. This will give candidates for county offices and for seats in the national convention ample time in which to make themselves known.

The Canton News-Democrat fears that the air in which THE INDEPENDENT man circulates renders him quite incapable of suggesting for a county fair. "A country fair," it writes. "is a country fair, and any effort to make it anything else would result in a dismal failure. We do not mean to insinuate that the fair last year was even a third-class country fair. When it is taken into consideration that Stark county has close to 100,-000 people, is the richest agricultural county in Ohio and the third richest in ' the United States, the fair last year was than nothing." The News Democrat objects to THE INDEPENDENT'S proposal that the municipalities exhibit, and presumably objects to its other suggestions, and while submitting some excellent generalities, does not say how good exhibits of poultry, needlework and so on can be obtained. THE INDEPENDENT submits that the country people are quite as deeply interested in town exhibits, as town people are in country exhibits, and as the expense of the enterprise is borne by both alike, both should be considered. Over half of the population of Stark county is an urban popu lation, and prebably the fair's patrons are divided in the same proportions.

Stannch friend, though he is of the canalidea, ex-Senator J. Park Alexander, of Akron, has come, to the conclusion that the Ohio canal in its present state, is in need of radical legislation. With some fifty-five counties through which the canal does not pass, the annual appropriation for maintenance is secured with increasing difficulty, and the highway itself is falling into decay-The northern or Massillon division, earns olls sufficient for its own necessities but they are diverted to less profit. able divisions, one of which, in one recent year, brought in the magnificent total of seventy-six cents. Mr. Alexander has an idea that it would be well to sume the cost of keeping them up. The the "South American Paris," by Richproposition is a novel one, and one which THE INDEPENDENT is not prepared ing, as the tolls earned here are only exceeded by those of Akron and Cleveland. counties would be gainers, but whether the plan admits of harmonious and efficient administration of the waterway flaws in Mr. Alexander's plan than to offer a new one.

THE ORIGIN OF CRIME.

Evangelist Little should curb a tendency to intemperance of speech such as is manifested in his remark that "ninetyeight out of every one hundred profligates came to a life of shame through the dance, and ninety-nine out of every one hundred criminals were led into crime through the so-called innocent amusements of society." There are no statistics of recognized value upon which to base any such observation, nor is it in harmony with the accepted conclusions of scientists respecting the original cause of crime. Of course, those who hold to a gross view concerning dancing should not dance, and those who find card playing stimulative to gambling should Massition, O. not play cards. Neither should those who cannot assimilate mince pie partake of the same. But these are all questions for personal decision.

For the real first cause of crime, we must go deeper than dancing, card playng or addiction to the pie habit. Scrip. tural authority is good enough for THE INDEPENDENT. Moses said that the "iniquity of the fathers" shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation," and scientists seem to agree with Moses more unanimously than with Mr. Little, whose many qualities THE INDEPENDENT gladly, recog-

This is an able and luminous expression of opinion, and a fitting companion to Tillman's speech which the New York Sun characterizes as "garbage talk" and then reviews in this cheerful strain:

CARROLL COUNTY'S SHERIFF.

Sheriff Ashbrook, of Carroll county, has been in town and seventeen worthy citizens have now in their possession as many official summons to appear before the Common Pleas court on Feb. 20, as witnesses in the Burns-Aston trial. Sheriff Ashbrook reports affairs at Carrollton as progressing and denies the rumor that Mickey Burns escaped Friday evening. ACHING FOR A FIGHT.

MILLIONS OF OUR PEOPLE WANT SOMETHING EXCITING.

This is the Unique View of Schator John L. Wilson, Who Also Affirms That War With England Is Bound to Come Sconer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The cautious few who deprecated Mr. Cleveland's Venezuela message and appealed to the sober second thought certainly ought to feel good just now, for that second thought has come, and it is sober, emphatically sober. If it were not such a serious matter and one involving a charge against the American people of

SENATOR JOHN L. WILSON.

The fact that surprises me most is that in the lobbies and about fown generally the change of opinion is even more radical than in congress. General Money of the house committee on forcently, and he luttered the keynote of eign affairs, just before going home to the whole subject of the uplifting of fight for the Mississippi senatorship, hit a big nail on the head when he said: Americans do not understand English opinion and think that Englishmen gencrally hate us very much, as the Irish in this country hate England, and the explanation of it is very simple. Our wars with Great Britain were both wars of independence, and therefore to us the most important of all wars in history, the untamed citizens of South Carolina. but to the English they were only 2 out The House of Representatives of that of some 50 national wars. FOR THIRTY DAYS.

THIRTY D man seems to change public opinion only because he speaks out what so many are thinking. One of the first things I discovered in my political career was that there are always plenty of plain people in the country who are thinking as they ought to think, but do not know how to tell it, and the politician who expresses their opinions better than they could do it themselves gets their votes." Senator John L. Wilson takes an original and unique view of this, as he does of most questions, and while 1 had to smile at ! his vehemence and quant phraseology the general effect of his views was depressing. We were talking of the Wolcott speech and the general conditions of business and the effect thereon of the very pleasant and profitable meeting Venezuela complication, when he sud- | We will for the next Thirty Days with Mrs. Villa Johnson, Friday after-denly broke out: "It's all claptrap, this noon. All these forces, however, would not bring a war, but there are other causes, and soon or late we must fight.'

"What other causes?" Bristling With Belligerency.

"You might put it in one word-contact. British power is steadily and rapidly expanding, and the United States is growing still more rapidly, and there are more points of irritating contact every year. The British are homming us in, and our people don't like it. They may not mean anything by it, but they are doing it just the same. In the islands to the south and southeast of us and all along our northern border they are piling up fortifications which bristle with cannon. What's the sense in their doing all that if, as they say, they are determined never to have trouble with us? Take our northern boundary and look at the strongholds of British power manned with the very latest and best artillery and dotting the whole line from Britain cannot pretend that any other 31

We have too many marks very radically. To my first quespoints of contact, and we are too much alike. Neither side will give an inch. And as to our common language, I look on that as the greatest danger, for when we blackguard each other all the people understand it. We read their books and papers, and they read ours, and every little aggravation looks big from the other side. Oh, they'll fight soon or late, and my present hope is that they will have their big fight in Europe first and have it soon, for we have the stuff to sell them and should get rich while they are fighting!"

A More Hopeful View.

After this dose of pessimism it was quite a plesure to drop into the room of the house committee on foreign affairs and hear the scholarly view of Chairman R. R. Hitt, who grows more confident as the weeks go on that the nations have about learned that they cannot afford to fight. He thinks that the deterrents to war have increased with such rapidity in the last 20 years that a long war would rain the richest nation, and that no man, however scientific. can foresee the result of a contest between different navies as at present constituted. "One great fact is," said he, "that all the romance that comes of personal prowess is completely eliminated, while the danger is ergymously increased. A man serving on one of these big warshops is no more than a stoker. The plates were all ready quantities of government securities are for printing the different denominations. They have been ready for some time. It is easy enough to prepare plates for a bond issue. The designs already on band are used, with such minor changes in dates as are made requisite by the terms of the new loan. The bond designs are stereotyped. old stock "borders" and "vignettes," In fact, there was never a complete design for currency until the bureau accepted the work of Artists Shirlaw and Low recently.

The stereotyped band designs are kept on cylinders of bardened steel. From one of these the design can be transferred to a soft steel plate in a transfer press by the process of rolling under heavy pressure. Then the figures, dates, etc., on the plate can be removed and new figures and dates put in their places. The plate is hardened then, and from it the altered form is transferred on the press to a cylinder of soft steel. This cylinder is hardened in the furnace, and with it many plates are made. There is a different plate, of course, for each denomination. The number of plates of each design made from the cylinders is regulated by the demand for those denominations. The smaller bonds are in the greatest demand, of course, and therefore the number of plates for the smaller denominations is greater. A Matter of Record. The distinctive paper on which the bonds are printed bus been seasoning in the vaults of the bureau for a long time. Before the work of printing is completed the chief will have a memorandum of the exact number wanted, and this number will be delivered to the treasury department, going over in the big inclosed wagon which carries all the government securities from the engraving bureau to the treasury department. The bonds are not made complete at the bureau. The final touch is added at the treasury department when the government scal is printed on them. The signatures on bank notes or government currency are engraved at the bureau and printed when the notes are un the honds is made at the treasury, notby the register himself, but by one of the clerks, who also puts his distinctive mark on the hond when he makes a record of it. Every bond can be traced back through the official hands which touched it in the process of making and issuing it and the responsibility for any error pased where it belongs. This caution is very meessary, since one little bond may represent $50,-000. Only one bond greater than this amount was ever i-sued by the government, and this bond now hangs on the wall of the office of the register of the treasury. It was for $15,500,000, the amount of the Geneva award paid by England in satisfaction of what were known as the "Alabama claims." This goney was paid to Hamilton l'ish as sectorary of state, and as congress had made no provision for the disposal of it he invested it in government 5 per cents, and the secretary of the treasury, for convonience, issued a single bond to him. The bond was canceled when the court of Alabama claims distributed its awards. Beside this big bond on the wall of the register's office lungs the oldest bond recorded

He sold pianes and organs at Findlay, and when, so it is alleged, he didn't pay his bill, the company had him arrested and put in in jail on the charge of embezzlement. They afterwards dropped proceedings and now he wants damages. The Edna Company, it will be recalled, began business here in a small way.

Members Folger, Doddridge, Miller, Humberger and Corns, of the board of education, were present at the regular meeting at the South Erie street room, Thursday evening. Mr. Huber being absent, Dr Miller presided. The salaries of the teachers and janitors were ordered paid, and various small bills sent in by the contractors at work on the new building were disposed of in a similar manner. No other business was transacted.

Mr. James R. Dunn received a letter act. today from Mr. Francesco Maria Guardabassi, containing news that will interest his Massillon friends. It seems that his port ait of the Pope, one of the few painted from life, and a work of art that has been highly spoken of wherever shown, was destroyed by the fire at the Haseltine art gallery in Philadelphia, where it was on exhibition. It was uninsured. Mr. Guardabassi had just about completed a sale of the portrait to the Catholic Club of New York. He is very much depressed by his loss, which, in an artistic sense, is irreparable.

Karl F. Miller is at home for the day, preparatory to his permanent removal 1:30 car in the afternoon, and the 6:30 to New York, where he has become secretary and treasurer of the Mining Securities and Registry Corporation. Mr. Miller says, concerning his company, whose business has been opened with every indication of great success: "No mining stock can be traded in on any eastern sexchange or with the public direct without a New York Registry or Transfer Office. This being our regular business we can perform the service cheaper and quicker than Trust Companies. We also have clients' money to loan in moderate amounts on first mortgage for the development of meritorious mining properties, where the ti-tle is under United States patents" Miller has also interested himself in some Arizonia mining property.

BILL NYE ON POETRY.

A BOOKLET WITH POETIC FEET THAT ARE NOT MATES.

The Humorist Gives an Object Lesson by Dropping Into Rhyme Himself, and Also Explains the Etiquette of Cards-Other Suggestions For the Society Novice.

[Copyright, 1896, by Edgar W. Nye.] A cheery little poem of 321 verses comes to this office recking with divine afflootus from the job office at Vevay, Ind. It is in the form of a booklet and looks some like Pcter Henderson's Seed Catalogue For 1896.

The title to this work is "Recollegtions of School Days." The only good feature about the work is that it is not a plagiarism on James Whitcomb Riley. It is more like Owen Meredith, I think.

The poetic feet, however, are not

SCANNING MISMATED POETIC FEET. line of size 9 with a D width, while the next one will have a C width and be much higher in the instep.

It runs along something like "Lucile." No pun is intended here. Poetic feet "Lucile" have no concealed humorous connection. The author's rhyme is a little hit free also. This is a fair sample of the style: The schoolhouse was small, and the benches As also the desks where the big scholars were greatest book known. Poetry should not be sacrificed to sense; neither should sense be sacrificed to poesy. First, the poet should have something to say, and then he should say it at an early date. Another little book has been sent to me for review, published in "Baltimore, M. D.," as the author calls it. It is written by "Bishop, the Bird Man" of Baltimore, as he calls himself. It is a treatise on the care of birds, but incidentally he gets in some good pieces to speak and other literature of a high

On page 39 he gives us a poem called "A Miller's Love." In a footnote on the same page he says:

"This song is arranged for baritone solo and soprano accompaniment. The air is in Tyrolese style, with a warbling chorus, and when properly sung at evenalways appreciated and applauded. "Will be sent on receipt of ten 2 cent postage stamps." Here are three of the first stanzas:

A MILLER'S LOVE.

[By Bishop, the Bird Man.] In a land far away, by the side of a stream, There stood an old mill, of which I oft dream.

The old miller's daughter, a maiden named Was my only love and intended bride.

I bid her farewell, to seek fortune and fame, Kissed tears from her cheeks, and she did the

So it would seem that Clyde was somewhat of a contortionist. We have always heard of the wonderful beauty of the Baltimore girls, but their agility has never before, I think, been suitably embalmed in song. It is not often that I drep into rhyme, but where I can thus express a great truth, and in that form. I may be pardoned perhaps for doing so. I do not idealize so much in my verse, but prefer rather to express with great force some grand idea.

I love nature, as all true poets must, and would be glad to paint a rhythmic picture with the verbal coloring of a Byron, but that is not wherein my great gift lies. I am better fitted to write in a space rates for him always found on Saturday that quotations of two lines session. Following is the programme: from himself he credited his own ac-

The verses given below resemble the style of Longfellow, and yet the great idea contained in them is my own. While there is a touch of sadness in the first three stanzas, the earnest truth is not, on the whole, sacrificed to sentiment or poetic construction:

FOOTSTEPS. Years ago the poct told us we could Make our lives subline,

And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time— Footprints that perhaps another, Sailing o'er life's stormy main, Some forlorn and shipwreezed brother, Seeing, might take heart again. Ah, the footsteps of my mother!

How they shaped my early course! How they steered me and me brother With their strong yet gentle force! Now my days are swiftly fleeing.
But the memory marght can shake
Of those footsteps on my being.
That her shipper used to make.

Again it becomes necessary to throw more light upon the ever attractive topic of card etiquette.

Where great formality is required, visiting cards should not be carried in the pocket with loose smoking tobacco.

Announcement cards should be all printed before the wedding, so that they may be sent as soon as the ceremony is over. In case there should be a postponement or adjournment of the marriage, the announcement cards, together with postage, may be charged to the groom. Ice cream also may be put into the bill for damages in case of breach of

A girl who has not yet come out should not have visiting cards. Girls who have appeared in thoroughly full evening dress are supposed to have come after their second season. Prior to that than 11 o'clock p. m. should put the time the fly leaf of a hymnbook will be found to do very well.

Where one is making formal calls on one's friends and where there are gentlemen in the house, one should leave one of one's own cards for each lady and one of one's husband's cards for each person in the house on whom one's husband would have called had he came, but if one's husband is absent in Dakota and liable never to return one may use one's own discretion about leaving one's husband's cards.

You should not get your "at home" cards mixed up with the visiting cards. Visiting eards cannot be satisfactorily renovated with benzinc.

A telephone number should never be put on a visiting card, nor should rates for board, in case one keeps summer boarders, be engraved on the card. It is in shocking taste and among the nobility is regarded with abhorrence.

After a tea one should call on the hostess at an early date, and one card should be left. Where cake was served with the tea, one should leave two cards.

Where friends call in a hired conveyance or by street car, the call may be returned by mailing the usual cards. In cases where callers occupy the time by reciting the bright sayings of their own children, instead of listening to my recital of what my children have said, I return their calls by messenger boy, 'collect.'' Where one starts out to make a call in

one's carriage and meets the people on whom one had started to call, an exchange of cards may be made from one carriage to the other, and the question of who should make the first subsequent call may be settled on the spot by a friendly game of "old sledge."

In calling upon the president of the United States one need not leave a card for each member of the cabinet.

It is in execrable taste to put a purple brownie stamp on your visiting cards, as it is also to ask your hostess to preserve and return any unsoiled cards of your own which she may have at the end of the season. If a gentleman calls at your home at

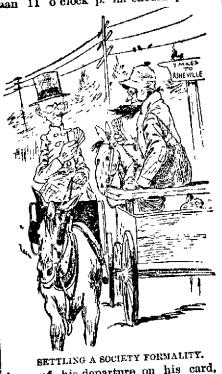

& o'clock in the morning in order to return your husband from the club, you need not return the call unless a friendly acquaintance should spring up at the time and one which it might be agreeable to cultivate. Where one's house takes fire and neighbors rush in to save the furniture, one card each for the host and hostess will be sufficient on entering. one should send cards one week in advance, so that the host may know where to send bills for food, groceries and shade trees to which horses are tied during the festivities.

If you are at home and your maid or footman should bring you a card that you do not like, you may draw another. Gentlemen callers, representing a new and especially fascinating lightning rod, times present strange difficulties is t need leave but two cards, one for the host and one for the hostess.

A gentleman caller who remains later

hour of his departure on his card, so that at the end of the month his gas account may be arranged without haggling and acrimony.

Never offer to assist a middle aged man in putting on his overcoat. An old man needs assistance and a young man enjoys it very much under certain circumstances, but to a middle aged man it implies encroaching years and is therefore highly offensive. If you are a host and wish to be extremely hospitable, do not, after your guest has his overcoat fairly on, seek to pull down the tail of his undercoat by reaching up among his suspenders. Some men are quite sensitive and ticklish under such circumstances and resent too much hospitality. In making a call, if you find that a which one lives, one cannot be too careful in returning the call as promptly as possible. A visiting card or P. P. C. card sent by mail is not sufficient. In making a call at a strange house, if you have just lighted an expensieigar, do not ask the footman to ta charge of it while you are making yo call. He might be tempted to smoke all up. It is wrong to place temptati In case of a large surprise party every in the way of servants who may be
